HISTORY OF THE SUPER CUP STOCK CAR SERIES

Discussion about an affordable stock car touring alternative started during the 2007 racing season as a result of costs escalating out of control from major changes year after year. The time had come to get back to the basic idea of running the cars that teams already had.

In the autumn of that year, two 50-lap exhibition trophy dashes were held in North Carolina with drivers coming from as far away as Pennsylvania, Iowa, Florida, Mississippi, and Indiana to participate with their steel-bodied stock cars.

On November 11, 2007, the Super Cup Stock Car Series was officially formed by a five member advisory board consisting of Owners, Drivers and Officials. Series operations are still guided using this method to this day.

The core of the well-received series would be the 3,300-pound former Pro Cup stock cars that were otherwise obsolete. An inaugural schedule of 10 sanctioned races held in five states at seven different race tracks was set for 2008. The new series had four first-time winners and two veterans winning races in its first season.

More than a decade has passed and the direction of the Super Cup Stock Car Series may have changed, but its goals have not. A simple idea continued that was started in the first place: race the cars that teams already have and be inclusive, not exclusive, allowing similar-type cars to race with the fewest amount of changes necessary.

When various stock car series evolved toward a different direction in recent years, it freed up an abundance of cars available and provided an opportunity for additional competitors to join the SCSCS family. The allowance of former Pro Cup composite-bodied cars along with a mix of past NASCAR and ARCA cars as well as engine combinations have since been welcomed with some minor changes that help maintain the identity of the series.

The overall footprint of interested facilities and competitors has migrated in different directions and has continued to expand. At the conclusion of 2019, 38 drivers residing in 12 different states had made at least one appearance, 90 percent achieving at least one top 10 finish. There were 15 unique lap leaders and eight of which were at the front of the field, four for the first time in their SCSCS career, when the checkered flag flew. All of these figures were new series records that were set. Over the years the series has hosted events at pavement short tracks in Indiana, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Virginia, and West Virginia.

Announced during 2019's season-ending Trophy Presentation, Tawaan Baker and Bill Ashton will join series director Joe Schmaling as working partners. Both Pennsylvania residents held recent involvement from various perspectives within the series and will have a role as senior advisory board members as well.

As a result of unexpected circumstances due to the unprecedented pandemic, the Super Cup Stock Car Series went through a year of inactivity competition-wise. Nevertheless, planning and preparation pressed on off the track for what is expected to be the biggest and best season yet in 2021. Nearly all facilities that were part of the 2019 schedule are on board with a few increasing their presence as well as a few new and returning venues adding to the versatility of the series.

SCSCS competitors have been and will continue to be showcased in front of a national audience on MAVTV Motorsports Network, the MAVTV Select service on various free streaming networks, and on-demand on MAVTV Plus. The future remains bright for the competitors, supporters, and partners.
